THE WAY IT WORKS.

Teaching a Calf to Drink is a Real Trying Operation.

Those who have had a mournful experience know that there is nothing more trying to the soul than the operation of teaching a young calf to drink. The process is familiar to every man who has brought up a calf from infancy. You seize a pail of warm milk and go into the stable, catch the calf by the ears, back him into a corner and beseech him to drink. The calf rather licks the pail and while you are reaching for the pail he employs his time in snuffing the lower corners of your jacket. You discover what the blockhead is about and for his ears. You can't help it. You feel that way and let him have it. But the calf can't tell for the life of him why he has been struck, and he gives a sudden and unexpected "boom." He believes he will go over and stay on the other side of the stable, but he doesn't announce the intention. He stands on the impulse of the moment, and you can't tell just when he arrives there. You ride along with him a little way. But the laws of gravitation are always about the same. Your legs—on each side of the corner—keep up with the calf for about a second, but your body doesn't. You slide over the calf and your back kisses the door. Your head is sticking in the pail of milk. When you get up you are red-nosed and dripping with milk from your hair and impregnated with your own sweat.
